From SEAGST to ATU

The Association for Theological Education in South East Asia (ATESEA) established the South East Asia Graduate School of Theology (SEAGST) in 1966 as part of its faculty development program for its member schools. In cooperation with the member schools of the Association, SEAGST has conducted programs of advanced theological studies and granted the degrees of Master of Theology (M.Theol) and Doctor of Theology (D.Theol).

Currently, due to the increasing number of schools that are capable to offer the Master of Theology program, the ATESEA General Assembly decided in July 2009 to focus the ATESEA's academic offering mainly on the D.Theol program, under a new name and structure. On September 6, 2009, the ATESEA Executive Committee approved the name of the school as ATESEA Theological Union (ATU).

Mission

Like the SEAGST, the mission of ATU is to enrich the intellectual and spiritual development of Asian theologians, responsive to the emerging opportunities facing the theological schools in Asia and beyond.

Core Values

Academic Excellence. ATU offers quality theological education for the professional development of teachers for the theology faculties and of leaders for Christian ministry in the church and society, under the supervision of competent professors both within and outside Asia.

Contextually Asian Theology. ATU encourages the construction of contextual and Asia-oriented theology by providing opportunities for research and reflection on the significance of the Christian faith in dialogue with other living faiths, cultures and traditions of Asia and contemporary challenges.

Community and Diversity. ATU provides opportunities for the interchange of the graduate students and faculty members among the different participating Centers for Theological Excellence of ATESEA, thus enhancing regional consciousness and fellowship across the barriers of race and cultures.

Admission Requirements

Applicants for admission must hold the SEAGST M.Theol degree or an equivalent degree.

Program of Study

The program is designed to ensure that the candidates acquire the required tools for scholarly competence in their field of studies, have exposure in the depth and breath of the basic literature of the field, and developed a working knowledge of the histories and cultures of Asia.
